

Oliver Shultz

Ollie and his wife were born in Seattle in the same hospital, but they met much later.

Raised in Seattle as a small child, then in Orville for a short time where his Dad had a bakery with his Dad's brother, then moved to Redmond where most of the family was. His Grandfather owned the Redmond Auction House, and was an auctioneer.

High School, studied, and socialized, worked as a box boy, then bakery. One time worked for Uncle on a dairy for summer.

After High School joined the Air Force. He then went to basic training in Texas, jet engine tech school in Illinois, and New Jersey, then to Japan for 2 years He then went to Charleston, South Carolina where he meet Karen from the Seattle area (again) though they did not know each other in the hospital.

He moved to the Redmond area, and contacted Karen and later married her. They have one son Erick. Oliver and Erick did many things through scouts hiking and overnight trips. That is where we meet Larry Throndsen. They were in the same troop.

After Air Force Oliver went to work for Boeing until the huge layoff in the 70s, then went to work for a box company die cutting, then to another box company, and Air Force Reserve. Later he became self employed making geese for a company in his building. It expanded into a company that did die cutting for printers for 10 years. The Air Force wanted him full time and he did like being with this group the most. They still visit.

He retired from Air Force almost 30 years and went back to Boeing for a short while he had more schooling and got his full airframe, powerplant license. He then went to work for Goodrich.

He is retired full time now and joined Rotary.

He likes to work on his Pontiac and has all the parts for an old truck, can't afford to rebuild it. He has worked for Larry doing CAD work when he needs help. He enjoys Dutch oven cooking, and Mariners Baseball He worked for one season as an usher at the ball field.
